

Anuman Interactive announces the release of Chapters 2 and 3 of “Dracula: The Path of the Dragon HD” for Apple iPad

Montreuil, July 26, 2010. Anuman Interactive announced the release of Dracula Chapters 2 and 3 for iPad. On this occasion, Chapter 1 will be sold at the price of the iPhone version for 72 hours.

Greatly appreciated by iPhone and PC gamers, the “Dracula” title has also found its fans on the iPad – thanks to the release of Chapter 1 of the story (June 25, 2010).

Today, Anuman Interactive announced the release of the remaining two chapters (Parts 2 and 3) in high-definition and will offer gamers the possibility to (re)live the adventures of Father Arno Moriani sporting a more convenient gameplay and touch screen interface.

As a reminder, the player takes on the role of Father Arno Moriani in a first-person adventure and investigation game that is split into three chapters and plunges him deep into 1920’s Transylvania.

The apps have of course been reworked to adapt to iPad functionalities (screen size, higher quality resolution) and benefit from a playability that is closer to PC versions.

On the occasion of the release of these final chapters the first part of the story will be available at 0.99 $ instead of 5.99 $ in order to allow budding adventurers to immerse themselves in the deliciously mysterious atmosphere that is “Dracula”.

The apps “Dracula: The Path of the Dragon – 2” and “Dracula: The Path of the Dragon – Part 3” are currently available from the App Store under the “Games” category, since July 20, 2010.
